HEN*Nozzles

Traditional smoothbore nozzles deliver large water droplets that excel at surface penetration, but they fall short on coverage and provide minimal gas cooling. On the other hand, fog nozzles offer wide coverage, yet their small droplets evaporate quickly and fail to penetrate surfaces for effective cooling. The ideal solution combines the penetration power of big droplets with the broad spread needed for complete fire suppression.

Training Foam

CTF1 training foam concentrate is designed to simulate the performance characteristics of film-forming firefighting foam concentrates for training purposes only. It is NOT effective NOR INTENDED FOR USE in actual firefighting operations.

704652

This training foam is formulated to produce a realistic, film-forming foam-like experience using conventional proportioning and discharge equipment, without the use of fluorinated chemicals. The foam's expansion ratios and drain times are comparable to those of traditional film-forming foam products. During fire training exercises, the foam does not create a sealing film on the fuel surface, allowing for repeated training evolutions and providing a more demanding and realistic training environment.
